DOWIE SHORT HALF A MILLION

Five Hundred Thousand Dollars is Overdrawn by "Apostle"

Testimony as to the ownership of Zion property was heard by Judge Landis Tuesday afternoon in the United States court at Chicago. The examination of witnesses may be finished this week after which, in accordance with the stipulation recently made, the judge will decide the entire issue between Dowie and Voliva.

The first witness was Fielding H. Wilhite, secretary to the Paradise Loan Company of Mexico, Dowie's latest venture. He declared that Zion City property is now worth about $3,000 an acre, 5,400 acres not being subdivided. He declared the Christian Catholic Apostolic church has churches in Cincinnati, St. Louis, Boston, New York, San Antonio, San Francisco, Philadelphia and many other cities of the United States and in the leading countries of Europe. Wilhite declares that he is a deacon in the church, and said that he attended the meeting of April 1, 1906, when Dowie was denounced by Voliva.

Attorney Jacob Newman cross-examined the witness, and brought out the fact that Dowie had overdrawn his account in the Zion City bank $500,000. Wilhite, attempted to explain, but Attorney Newman objected. Wilhite then testified that $160,000 represented money subscribed for the Mexican enterprise, of which $16,000 had been expended for various purposes. He declared that at the present time there should be over $130,000 to the credit of the enterprise in the Zion bank.

Dr. Dowie did not appear in court. He was represented by Attorneys P. C. Haley and Emil C. Wetten. Voliva was represented by Attorney J. Newman and Attorney Whitney, with V. V. Barnes, former confidential and legal advisor to Dr. Dowie.

The first move in the morning was the issuance of a restraining order enjoining Jane Dowie, wife of Dr. Dowie, and the son, Gladstone Dowie, from removing about $6,000 worth of silver plate from St. Louis house at Zion.

Attorney Haley declared that after Dowie was deposed the Voliva faction produced a poet to attack him.

"They produced a man who they believed had a vein of poetry in him who got up a doggerel about Dr. Dowie which would not be permitted in a house of ill repute, and their choir and people sang it to poison the minds of the people against the old man who brought them thus together," said Mr. Haley. "I will show this to the court later."

Attorney Newman declared Dowie never earned a dollar in his life.

"I claim that the property belongs to God," interposed Mr. Haley.

"Well, he is not a party to this litigation."

This statement brought a loud laugh from the followers at the rear of the room. Judge Landis pounded upon his bench for quiet and then directed the bailiff to clear the room of spectators.

REBATES DECREE FAR REACHING

Commissions to the Refrigerator Concern Illegal.

Milwaukee, June 12.—A formal decree was entered Monday by United States Circuit Court Judge W. H. Seaman in the so-called rebate case, instituted by the government against the Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit company, the Pere Marquette Railroad company, the Erie Railroad company, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad company, the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad company and the Wisconsin Central Railroad company, in which a decision was handed down by the United States circuit court about a week ago.

As far as the Pere Marquette company is concerned, the suit is dismissed on its merits and an injunction will not be issued against it.

Decree Is Drastic.
The decree is sweeping in its nature and restrains and perpetually enjoins the Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit company, its agents and representatives from in any way soliciting, accepting or receiving, and the defendant railroad companies from paying or giving any rebates or concessions whatever. It enjoins them from carrying or transporting in interstate or foreign commerce any freight or property whatever pursuant to any agreement or arrangement whereby less rates are given than those given in the official tariffs published pursuant to acts of congress, whether such diminutions of rates be made under guise of commissions or otherwise.

THE LIBERTYVILLE RACE TRACK.

Many Good Horses are Training There for the Coming Season.

On the mile track at Libertyville there is now located a bout 150 horses, trotters and pacers, some with good records and some without anything but good prospects. Among the trainers are the following: First and foremost as usual, Ed. Giers with 17, among them such horses as Turkey 2:07 1/2, Golden Maid 2:09 1/2, etc.; Dick McMahon with 24 head, Brophy Stock Farm 18 head, mostly youngsters, Tom Leonard with 6 head, James Hogan of Memphis with 7 head, including Snyder McGregor, 2:05 1/2, Grattan Stock Farm with 20 head, James Brady of Macon, Georgia, with 4 head, "Scotty" with 6 head, Dr. Hersheim of Kenosha with 2 head and Ed. Sherman of Lake Geneva with 4 head, including Trixie A. 2:18 1/2 and Mildred 2:21 1/2, beside several other smaller stables.

The track is in first class condition and everything is kept in first class shape to accommodate trainers and visitors, and most any afternoon from 10 to 20 horses can be seen getting their regular workouts preparatory to the season's racing.

The society has advertised a race-meeting for July 4, and should to all appearances have a successful meeting.

Making Flowers Pay.

For miles of the valley a vicar in Jarmarthen draws $2,500 a year from a London dealer; while an old lady in Berkshire is said to make nearly 15,000 yearly out of Marechal Niel roses.

It is charged that an injunction issue against the defendants pursuant to this decree, and the plaintiff recover the costs and disbursements in the action.

Violate Acts of Congress.
The decree recites that the combination and the rates, regulations and practices described in the petition—twice: The agreement for and payment by the defendant railroad companies to the defendant refrigerator company of percentages and commissions on account of any shipment of freight or property over and along lines of the companies, from points in any one state to points in any other states or territories in the United States, or any payment on such act or consideration to said defendant refrigerator company other than reasonable mileage for the use of its cars—are unlawful and in violation of acts of congress.

It declares that the railroads, their agents, officers or servants are perpetually enjoined from paying and that the refrigerator company, its officers, agents and servants are perpetually enjoined from soliciting or accepting from any defendant railroad company any concession, discrimination or percentage of freight charges paid to or charged by defendants in pursuance to their published tariffs on any freight transported in interstate commerce in the cars of the Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit company.

The decree is dated June 11, and is signed by United States Circuit Judge W. H. Seaman.

DEATH OF WATIE AMES

Passes Away After a Long Illness of Many Months.

On Tuesday night occurred the death of Miss Watie M. Ames, daughter of Mrs. Phoebe Ames of this place after a long illness extending over a period of many months the cause of which was consumption. Miss Ames was born at Hickory on the twenty-ninth day of September, 1851, and has lived in this vicinity all her life. For about twenty years she has been a member of the Methodist church and was one of its most energetic workers until failing health compelled her to give up her duties in that line. She was of a kind and lovable disposition and was ever on the outlook for an opportunity to do good. She had been a teacher in the M. E. Sunday School for years and many of the young people of our town have profited by her kind words of advice.

She leaves to mourn her loss an aged mother, four sisters and two brothers, besides a large circle of friends. Not only in the home will she be missed, but also in the many places where she was ever ready to lend a helping hand.

The funeral will be held at the home of her mother, and the remains will be laid at rest in the Hickory cemetery.

EIGHT MEN DIE IN MINE FIRE

Many Others Were Killed in Cyclone Over the Northern States

Anaconda, Mont., June 8.—One of the most serious accidents in the history of coal mining in Montana has occurred in the mines of the Northern Pacific at Rocky Fork, near Red Lodge, Carbon county.

Eight men are dead, all victims of the deadly white damp that filled the corridors of the mine after the fire which started Wednesday. Their bodies have been recovered, but the story of the work of rescue parties is a tale of unexcelled bravery and heroic self-sacrifice.

Of the dead, two were members of one of the parties that entered the mine in the effort to reach the men known to be there. The dead:

Terrance Fleming.
William Bailey.
Mike Gabriage.
Thomas Skelley.
Al McFate.
Matt Relikka.
Roy Carey.
Joe Bracey.
Carey and Bracey were of the rescue party.

Aged Woman Drops Dead.
As Bailey's body was brought up his aged mother, who was at the pit mouth, dropped dead from the shock.

Victims of Cyclones.

St. Paul, Minn., June 8.—Six dead, many seriously injured and thousands of dollars' worth of property blown away, briefly summarizes the effects of the storms which Wednesday devastated sections of Minnesota and Wisconsin. There were two separate storms, one in southern Minnesota and western Wisconsin, and one in the northern part of Minnesota, which also swept over into Wisconsin. The dead are:

Near Stoddard, Wis., Halvor J. Halvorson.

Near Caledonia, Minn., Mrs. Peter Meyers and two children.

Near North Branch, Minn., Mr. Engdahl, Sr., and Andrew H. Olson, the latter killed by lightning.

There was considerable damage done to sawmill property near Nevers, Wis., but no lives were lost.

Bad Storm in Iowa.

Decorah, Ia., June 8.—Between four and five o'clock Wednesday a tornado passed a section of Winnebago county doing much damage and injuring a number of people.

Within a radius of a few miles of Locust, a post office 12 miles north not less than $50,000 damage has resulted.

At Edward Thorson's, the barn and residence were destroyed and all the people in the house were injured. The youngest son was buried in the ruins of the house and when rescued was found to be in a serious condition.

At Kittie Sorenson's the barn and windmill were blown away.

On the farm tenanted by Eldine Ellingson, the house, two barns and out-buildings were demolished.

Mrs. Carrie Luross and Puls Larson, each lost a barn and D. T. Manning's residence was blown away.

Tornado Kills Laborer.

Plainville, Mich., June 8.—Sweeping a path one mile and a quarter wide for a distance of three miles Thursday night a tornado that struck the villages of Martin and Monteth, respectively six miles and four miles north of here, killed William West, a farm laborer, aged 54, seriously injured several others and did much damage to stock and farm buildings and uprooted a number of large orchards.

CHILD DRINKS ACID

Mother Was Cleaning House and Left the Bottle on the Floor.

Out on Belvidere street, in Waukegan, a home is darkened and sad because the little daughter that up to Friday played and sang around the house now is dead from drinking carboic acid.

A bottle from which the acid was being used, was set down and with childish curiosity the girl drank some. After a night of suffering, death relieved her at 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

The mother, Mrs. John Murk, of 1194 Belvidere street, was using the carboic acid on some furniture upstairs. Downstairs the little girl, about two years old was playing.

It came time to milk the cow that the family owns and the mother set the bottle down on the floor and went out, not thinking about the little girl.

Returning, after milking, she went upstairs just as the girl, who had wandered upstairs, drank the poison.

The agonized mother called for aid immediately, summoning Dr. Daniels, and she herself worked over the baby.

Not much had been swallowed and the child lived during the night. It was impossible to save her life, however, and Saturday morning, about 9 o'clock, she died.

The mother is prostrated. The child's father, John Murk, is employed at the Dow mill.

Visible Supply of Grain.

New York, June 12.—The visible supply of grain Saturday, June 9, as compiled by the New York produce exchange, was as follows: Wheat, 29,783,000 bushels, decrease 1,028,000; corn, 3,316,000, increase, 446,000; oats, 8,196,000, decrease 778,000; rye, 1,523,000, decrease 69,000; barley 938,000, increase, 34,000.

Insurance Men on Trial.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 12.—The third insurance trial, the case against Judge W. A. Kerr, began Monday. Judge Kerr is charged with appropriating $10,000 to his personal use while acting as director and counsel for the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

Winder to Settle Strike.

Columbus, O., June 12.—The Ohio operators who have been resisting the demands of the miners, decided to place the whole matter in the hands of John H. Winder, chairman of the conference. All negotiations for reopening the mines will be made by him.

Oldest Game.

With the exception of chess, dice-throwing is said to be the oldest game still in existence. The ancient Egyptians indulged in games of dice, and often not only risked their fortunes but their liberty on a single turn. In 1667 there were over 100 different kinds of games of dice in England.

ICE HOUSE BURNED AT SILVER LAKE

Another mysterious fire occurred among the ice houses of Kenosha county just after 6 o'clock Sunday evening, when the big house owned by the Knickerbocker Ice company situated on the east shore of Silver Lake was completely destroyed by a fire of unknown origin. There had been no fire in the building for months and the managers of the company find no explanation of the mysterious blaze.

Just after 6 o'clock fishermen on the lake noticed a little column of smoke coming out of the roof of the big building and the alarm of fire was given. There was no apparatus for fighting the fire and in half an hour the great structure was a mass of flames. The flames spread to all parts of the building and the fire was carried to the roofs of surrounding buildings and several of them caught fire. The people at the lake managed to save the smaller buildings, but the ice house and barns owned by the ice companies a short distance from the ice house was completely destroyed. The horses were removed from the barn, but a large amount of hay and grain was burned with it.

The ice house was partially filled with ice and the loss from the fire will be a heavy one. The house was one of the largest at Silver Lake and had a capacity of thousands of tons. It was a new house having been erected only a few years ago. The loss is estimated at thirty to forty thousand dollars with partial insurance. Added to this there will be a heavy loss of ice destroyed. Today the big pile of ice left on the site of the house is being transferred to other houses, but it will be possible to save only a small portion of it.

Pleads Guilty to Murder.

Garni, Ill., June 12.—Alexander Hutchcraft, who with Luther Gilman was indicted for the murder of William Jones a year ago, Monday entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to 20 years in the state prison.

Threatens "Uncle Joe" Cannon.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 12.—Post office inspectors are working in this city trying to trace the writer of threatening postal cards which have been mailed from Indianapolis to Speaker Cannon at Washington.

Longworths Are Applauded.

London, June 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, with Ambassador and Mrs. Reid, visited the Alhambra theater, where they witnessed the production of the new ballet, "L'Amour." The party was applauded.

Columbia River Fish Wheels.

A curious plan for catching fish is used on the Columbia river. A number of wheels are set up in the middle of the stream, which as they turn round catch the fish and cast them into troughs by the river bank. As much as five tons weight of fish a day has thus been taken.

TEWES SELLS OUT TO THE ICE TRUST

The Knickerbocker Ice company, commonly known as the ice trust, stifled the last vestige of opposition in the business in Kenosha county on Friday afternoon when John S. Field, president of the trust, completed a deal for the purchase of all the property of the Tewes Ice company.

Deeds for the transfer of the property were filed for record with the register of deeds of the county. The sale of the Tewes property practically ends the fight against the combine, for while there are a few little independent houses in the county the holdings of these companies are so small they would be little more than a drop in a well in comparison with the holdings of the trust.

The property of the Tewes company was located on the shores of Silver Lake and it was the most valuable ice harvesting property in the county. Henry G. Tewes purchased it many years ago and he had been the most determined fighter against the trust. While his holdings were limited to Silver Lake his houses were the largest in the county and his Chicago business is said to have been the only one feared by the Knickerbockers. Tewes has been the main opponent of the trust for three years, and in that time Field and his associates have made many efforts to put him out of business by purchasing his holdings.

Two years ago Tewes built bigger houses and announced that he would fight the trust to the bitter end and that the business founded by his father would never be turned over to the big combine. Tewes made a good fight but a year ago the largest of his houses was destroyed by fire and ill luck has been his portion ever since. The bad season for ice cutting also worked against him and it is supposed that he was left practically at the mercy of the trust.

No mention of the price paid for the property is mentioned in the deed, but the fact that President Field, Friday placed a mortgage on file in this county pledging his property for $103,000, seems to indicate that this was the amount paid for the property. The deal also included the purchase of the offices and ice houses of the Tewes company in Chicago.

When the ice trust had competition in Kenosha the ice sold by the independent companies was from Silver Lake houses of Tewes company, and should an effort be made to form a competing company in this city at this time, it would be impossible for the company to handle ice from Kenosha county lakes without paying the price demanded by the trust.

Pope's Golden Rose.

The Golden Rose with which the pope is presenting Princess Ena of Battenberg on the occasion of her marriage to the king of Spain, which is the highest honor the pope can confer on a Catholic princess, is a mimic plant of pure gold in a golden pot whereon are emblazoned the papal arms. It has leaves, buds and flowers, the leaves being set with small jewels in imitation of dewdrops. In the central flower is a tiny receptacle in which is contained a small palm leaf blessed by the pope.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS ENTERTAIN

Neighboring Camps are Well Represented A Fine Banquet was Served.

On Tuesday afternoon of this week the members of Olson Camp R. N. A. of this place entertained about one hundred guests from neighboring camps. In the Villa, Gurnee, Bristol, Salem, Libertyville, Grayslake and Wilmet were represented. The opera house was rented for the occasion and after the meeting had been called to order Mrs. Smart gave the welcome address. A program consisting of music, recitations and a fancy drill was given. Eddie Myers of Silver Lake was present and favored the audience with a number of selections on the chimes. Speeches were in order and some of the guests made a few remarks for the good of the order.

At the conclusion of the program a short time was spent in social conversation then the guests were formed in line and escorted by the marshals to the Woodman hall where a sumptuous banquet was served. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion in the lodge colors, purple and white with a profusion of flowers. After the banquet was over the guests departed for their homes thanking Olson Camp most heartily for the pleasant afternoon spent with them, and none who were present could help feeling that it is a benefit in every way to belong to that great family, the R. N. of A.

CARRIE SIVERS MARRIED.

Young Woman who Disappeared Two Weeks Ago Married at Kenosha.

The mystery of the recent disappearance of Carrie Sivers, as noted in these columns last week, has been solved at last.

The Kenosha News of Tuesday says it is reported that the young woman who was alleged to have been kidnapped was united in marriage on Monday to Albert Norman, a Kenosha teamster. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. W. Stevens of the Park avenue M. E. church.

A special order of the court was secured on account of the age of the bride, she being but 15 years of age, although she testified before the ceremony that she was 18 years of age.

ELGIN ASYLUM HEAD HAS RESIGNED

Superintendent Whitman of Elgin Asylum Voluntarily Leaves Position.

Dr. Frank S. Whitman tendered his resignation to the board of trustees at the Northern Illinois Insane Hospital. It was accepted, to take effect July 1.

Dr. Whitman first handed in his resignation as head of the institution three months ago, but the trustees refused to accept it. It was accepted last Thursday only on the positive demand of Dr. Whitman. Dr. Whitman made the following statement:

"I have contemplated this move for some time. My only reason is that I do not care longer to bear the burden and responsibility of the position."

Dr. Whitman has been superintendent for eight years.

INDICTMENTS FOR INSURANCE CHIEFS

ALLEGATIONS OF FORGERY AND PERJURY MADE.

OUTLINE OF THE CHARGES

Grand Jury Holds False Entries Were Made in Books of the Mutual Life by Former Vice President.

New York, June 12.—Indictments for forgery and perjury against Dr. Walter G. Gillette, and for forgery and filing false statements against Robert A. Granniss, both former vice presidents of the Mutual Life Insurance company, were returned Monday by the special grand jury which has been investigating insurance affairs for the past six weeks.

Six indictments were found against Dr. Gillette, five for forgery in the third degree, and one for perjury. Mr. Granniss was indicted for forgery and for making false statements to the insurance department, the latter being a misdemeanor.

Both defendants immediately surrendered themselves and were admitted to bail.

The forgery indictments against Dr. Gillette are based upon alleged false entries in the books of the company and the perjury charge grows out of his testimony before the grand jury.

The forgery indictment against Granniss is based upon alleged false entries upon the annual report of the Mutual for 1904 to the insurance department. It is alleged that the sum of $1,044,058.23, the net profits of the company for 1904, was not noted in that report, but was concealed by Mr. Granniss. The misdemeanor charge of making false statements grows out of the filing of the alleged false report to the insurance department.

Allege False Entry.

The first indictment against Gillette recites that while vice president of the Mutual, on May 4, 1904, he caused to be made in the account book of the company known as the blotter, a false entry that $4,500 had been paid to the firm of George McKibbin & Son for advertising indebtedness, when as a matter of fact neither that sum nor any other sum was paid to George McKibbin & Son.

The second indictment charges that on the same date a fraudulent entry of $20,601, for printing and stationery was made, when as a matter of fact only $12,701 was paid for that purpose.

The third indictment charges that on May 11, 1904, the defendant made a false entry in the cash book, indicating the payment of $6,387 for advertising, when as a matter of fact only $2,876 had been spent for that purpose.

The fourth indictment charges that on May 4, 1904, the defendant caused to be entered in the blotter a fraudulent entry that the sum of $3,400 had been paid to Charles E. Parsons for stationery and printing, when as a matter of fact neither that nor any other sum had been so paid.

The fifth indictment charges that on May 11, 1904, a fraudulent entry was made in the blotter that $3,511 had been paid to George McKibbin & Son, when in fact no sum at all had been paid. All five of the indictments charge forgery in the third degree.

Perjury Is Charged.

The sixth indictment charging perjury recites that the defendant for two years prior to April 1, 1906, was an officer of the Mutual Life, and that on May 11, 1906, he appeared before the grand jury and was sworn. The indictment charges that it was material to the investigation to learn whether a certain bank account at Dobbs Ferry was Gillette's personal account and from what source the deposits had been obtained. It charges that he feloniously declared under oath that it was his personal account and that it had been obtained from his personal account elsewhere, when as a matter of fact the account was as trustee of the Mutual Life, and the money deposited had not come from the defendant's personal account, but from the funds of the Mutual Life.

The indictment against Granniss for forgery in the third degree charges that his report for the year ending December 31, 1904, filed with the state superintendent of insurance, failed to make any report whatever of profit and income from the sale and maturity of ledger assets, while as a matter of fact the company's net profit from that source for the year indicated it was $1,044,058.23. It charges that on February 28, the defendant, well knowing the premises, caused the report to be prepared and verified under oath by two of the officers of the company. It was his duty, the indictment charges, to have indicated and shown this profit and income as it was a material particular in the affairs of the corporation.

The second indictment against Granniss charges a misdemeanor, the indictment being based upon the same facts as alleged in that charging forgery. It charges that Granniss, "well knowing the statement to be false, unlawfully concurred in having the report so prepared and the statement containing false and untrue statements transmitted to the superintendent of insurance."

New Trial for Patrick Denied.

New York, June 12.—Recorder Goff Monday denied a motion for a new trial in the case of Albert T. Patrick, the convicted murderer of William Marsh Rice.

J. L. SWAYER,
Republican Candidate For COUNTY CLERK.
Subject to the action of the Primaries

GEORGE B. STEPHENS.

George Stephens, candidate for the republican nomination for treasurer, subject to the will of the coming republican primaries, which will be held later, is a native born Illinoisan. He was born at Homer, Will county, November 15, 1848, and since 1853 has always lived in Lake county.

Mr. Stephens served several terms as president of the Millburn Mutual Fire Insurance Co., which was organized in 1855 and which is a strong local insurance concern.

He received his education in Lake county schools and since 1871 has been engaged in farming in Newport township. He has always been prominent in republican politics and served three terms on the board of supervisors, being elected chairman of that organization twice, serving as well as chairman of the Lake county board of review.

Your support will be appreciated at the primaries August 4.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Republican Voters of Lake County.

After supporting and contributing to the success of the Republican party, for the past thirty years and never having held a County office, I feel I can consistently ask the Republican voters for their support of County Judge.

Fifteen years of active practice at the Lake county bar, leads me to believe that the duties of the office of County Judge require the entire time of the Court; and if elected to that position, I will devote my whole time to the office and the best interests of the people of Lake county.

Your support will be most thankfully received at the primaries August 4.

EDWARD J. HEYDECKER.

Captured Monkey-faced Owl.

A monkey-faced owl, the rarest specimen of a bird ever seen in California, flew through a glass window of the Redding schoolhouse and was captured alive by the janitor, who presented it to the landlord of the Temple hotel, where it is on exhibition before many wondering gazers.

The owl is of a beautiful gray color, but its face is the characteristic feature. In place of the usual round face of the owl, this bird has the features of a monkey. The wings, too, are of unusual length.

SENATOR FROM DELAWARE

Col. Dupont Defeats J. Edward Addicks for Toga in Contest Before Republican Caucus.

Dover, Del., June 12.—Col. Henry A. Dupont of Wilmington Monday night defeated J. Edward Addicks in the contest for the vacant seat from Delaware in the United States senate.

Mr. Dupont was selected to fill the vacancy by the caucus of Republican members of the legislature, which was in session several hours.

The action of the caucus ends a contest that has continued for 11 years, during which time Addicks was the candidate of the Union Republicans for United States senator.

There was a full attendance of both members of both wings of the Republicans at the caucus.

There was a long discussion and when the vote was finally taken it stood: Dupont, 20; Addicks, 10; H. H. Ward, 1.

Following the announcement of the vote, Senator Cooper, an Addicks supporter, made a motion that Dupont's selection be made unanimous, which was adopted.

The Democratic members of the legislature have criticized Gov. Lea for calling an extra session of the legislature and they have declared they will take no part in the voting.

Plan to Adjourn Congress.

Washington, June 12.—In an effort to bring about an adjournment of congress by July 1 or earlier, Senator Allison, chairman of the senate Republican steering committee, will call the committee together to consider the programme for the remainder of the session.

Anniversary of Royal Murder.

Belgrade, June 11.—The third anniversary of the assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga witnessed memorial services in two churches. The conspirators held services over the graves of their three comrades killed the night of the murder of their majesties.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Many people who are neglecting symptoms of kidney trouble, hoping "it will wear away," are drifting towards Bright's Disease, which is kidney trouble in one of its worst forms.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

stops irregularities, strengthens the urinary organs and builds up the worn-out tissues of the kidneys so they will perform their functions properly. Healthy kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood as it passes through them. Diseased kidneys do not, and the poisonous waste matter is carried by the circulation to every part of the body, causing dizziness, backache, stomach trouble, sluggish liver, irregular heart action, etc.

If you have any signs of Kidney or Bladder trouble commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once, as it will cure a slight disorder in a few days and prevent a fatal malady. It is pleasant to take and benefits the whole system.

How to Find Out.

You can easily determine if your kidneys are out of order by setting aside for 24 hours a bottle of the urine passed upon arising. If upon examination it is cloudy or milky or has a brick-dust sediment or small particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased, and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE should be taken at once.

G. B. Burhans Testifies After Four Years.

G. B. Burhans of Carlisle Center, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick-dust sediment and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed, and I am evidently cured to stay cured, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."

SOLD AND RECOMMENDED BY JAMES H. SWAN

CHURNS ARE STILL USED.

Even in This Day of Creameries, Butter Is Made in the Old-Fashioned Way.

"The chances are ten to one or better," said a woodenware man, "that the butter you buy at the grocery store now was made in a creamery, for the great bulk of the butter consumed in this country is now made in milk establishments. But there is still some butter made by hand, and we still sell churns right along."

"The greater number of these now sold are of the cylinder type, operated by a crank, turning within the churn a wheel with paddles, sometimes like the paddlewheel of a steamboat; but we still sell, as well, churns of the old-fashioned dasher type such as our grandfathers used, and such as their grandfathers used before them. I might add that the old-fashioned dasher churn is still, as it has always been, painted blue."

"Who still buys these old style hand churns in the day of machine made butter? Why, so to speak, the oldest people, and the most modern."

"They are bought by small farmers keeping only one or a few cows, who naturally continue to make their own butter, and who make it, of course, with a hand churn. Some of these farmers might make more butter than they would require for their own use; and the surplus they would sell, as they would their surplus eggs, to the country store."

"And you would find larger farmers, too, farmers perhaps keeping many cows and selling the bulk of their milk to a creamery, still continuing to make the butter that they needed for themselves and making it, as they have always done, in a hand churn."

"And such churns are sold to people living in suburban or country homes and keeping cows, who make their own butter because they prefer to, anyway, and they are bought by various people, everywhere, who want sweet, or unsalted, butter, and make it for themselves in hand churns."

"We export churns to the West Indies and South America and to New Zealand and Australia and to dairying countries in various other parts of the world."

Sanitary Nose Bags.

In reply to inquiries in regard to the sale of sanitary feed bags for horses in England, Consul Griffiths, of Liverpool, writes: "Much, of course, depends upon the style, quality, durability of the bags, and a very important item is the cost. The 'nose bags' (ventilated) used here are made of strong cocoa fiber, and are sold for three shillings (73 cents) each. Bags of the same material, leather-bottomed, are sold for 4s 6d ($1.09) each; leather-cornered bags, 3s 6d (85 cents) each, and extra fine manilla bags, $1.09 each."

Modest Greatness.

One day a letter was received at the post office in Paris bearing the following inscription: "To the Greatest French Poet." The letter carrier was instructed to deliver it to Victor Hugo, who refused to receive it and sent it to Lamartine. This genius also declined to accept the letter and passed it on to Alfred de Musset. The latter, equally modest, resent it to Victor Hugo, who finally accepted it. The letter had reached its destination. —Lippincott's Magazine.

Quaky Island.

Lundy, in the Bristol channel, is an island where one may see an earthquake at any time. There is nothing alarming about these "earthquakes," however; they are simply certain curious crevasses in the west of the island, which the local people call by that name. Lundy in former centuries was a notorious nest of pirates. In King Henry III's time William de Marisco, a traitor to the king, built a castle there and set up as an early Capt. Kidd.

Fun for All But Blinks.

"I thought all the toasts to-night were to be of a light and amusing nature?"

"They are."

"But you have Blinks down for a topic that is decidedly heavy and serious."

"Of course. If there is anything funnier than Blinks trying to tackle a great principle that he doesn't fully understand, I don't know what it is."

—Stray Stories.

Mental Athletics.

Items in the first great athletic meeting held in China, which took place at Canton, were arithmetic races. Pupils from schools carried slates and pencils, and in the course of the race they encountered a blackboard containing a sum to be solved. The boys were lined up as they reached the goal, and those whose calculations were wrong were then eliminated. The first three left in the line were counted winners.

Water in London.

There is an increasing tendency on the part of large consumers of water in London to draw on the water reservoirs in the lower geological strata beneath the capital rather than be indebted to companies for their water supply. The latest institution to show its independence in this fashion is Clements' Inn, where, not 20 yards from the Strand, an artesian well has just been tapped, after three months' boring, at a depth of 450 feet.

COBURN DECLINES HONOR.

Gov. Hoch, of Kansas, Tenders Burton's Toga to Judge Benson, Who Accepts.

Topeka, Kan., June 11.—F. D. Coburn, secretary of the state board of agriculture, who was tendered the appointment to succeed Joseph R. Burton in the United States senate, notified Gov. Hoch Saturday that he could not accept. Immediately the governor called former Judge A. W. Benson, of Ottawa, Kan., by telephone and tendered the appointment to him.

Ottawa, Kan., June 11.—Judge Alfred Watson Benson, of this city, who Saturday was offered the appointment of United States senator to succeed Joseph R. Burton, stated Sunday that he would accept the position.

INDIANA INDORSES BRYAN.

Nebraska Man Is Choice of Democratic Convention for President in 1903.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—Democrats of Indiana in convention Thursday adopted a platform strongly endorsing William J. Bryan for the presidency and selected a state ticket as follows:

For secretary of state, James F. Cox, Columbus; for auditor of state, Marion Bailey, Ligon; treasurer of state, John Isenbarger, North Manchester; for attorney general, Walter J. Lotz, Muncie; for clerk of supreme court, Bert New, North Vernon; for superintendent of public instruction, Robert J. Haller, Monroe county; for state geologist, Edward Barrett, Hendricks county; for state statistician, David M. Curry, Sullivan county.

COAXING THE AUTOMOBILE

Philosophic Farmer Gives His Ideas About the Inventor of the Machine.

An automobile stood in front of a gasoline supply station over in Jersey a few days ago and, of course, the usual crowd assembled to take a look at the show. Among the spectators, says the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, was an old farmer, who walked all around the machine and interestedly watched every movement of the chauffeur.

As soon as the gasoline was procured and stowed away the chauffeur turned the crank to start the spark, and a moment later the auto was humping down the pike at a pace that made the country constables sit up and take notice. It was then that a gleam of satisfaction appeared on the sun-scorched visage of the ancient agriculturist.

"Them automobiles is great inventions all right," he remarked to a bystander, "but their geezers what got 'em up had ter take a tip from us hayseeders on how ter make 'em blam'd things go, jes ther same."

"Put me wise," said the party addressed, "I fail to catch your meaning."

"Waal," rejoined the farmer, with his smile still beaming, "when any of us heekers has got an old cow what gits got contrary an' won't go through a gate or in a barn door, we jes twists her tail a couple o' turns, an' off she hustles."

CLOSE STUDY OF VOLCANO

Peril Greater Than That Encountered by the Soldier Is Confronted.

In sticking so long to his observatory close to the summit of Vesuvius, Prof. Matteucci gives a remarkable proof of—what? He voluntarily remains in peril probably greater than is encountered by the soldier who leads a forlorn hope, and certainly greater than that of participation in any ordinary battle, says the New York Times. His danger, too, takes a form from which even the most conspicuous could be excused from shrinking, for at any moment he may be exposed to the direct action of the most powerful of terrestrial forces, and the very ground under his feet may instantly crumble and drop him into a fiery abyss that is the reality of the theological imaginations. Is he risking the martyrdom of science, or merely that of the scientific curiosity? In other words, is his course justified by the prospect of gaining from close inspection of the volcano new and valuable knowledge of the cataclysmic action going on within it? Nothing in the dispatches constantly telegraphed by him to Naples very clearly indicates that he is seeing anything more than is visible to those observing the eruption from a greater distance and in comparative safety, while it is certain that much visible to them is invisible to him. The pictures as a whole is concealed from the man in the midst of the whirling ashes, and he has announced that his instruments for the measurement of seismic disturbances have been displaced by the constant convulsions to which they have been subjected. And yet Prof. Matteucci and his American assistant have remained coolly, or at least calmly, at their posts, and beyond any question they have utilized in some way and to some degree opportunities that never came before to scientists as well equipped as they for understanding and recording the tremendous events of a great volcanic eruption. It is from something more than idle, or even from scientific curiosity that they are staking their lives on the outcome of successive minutes, any one of which may be their last. If they escape they will have the material for a "paper" such as has never appeared in the "transactions" of any society, and he is pessimistic indeed who does not hope that what they learn by braving the mountain's rage will prove to be worth the frightful risk involved in getting it.

Guards Against Kisses.

Two soldiers have been detailed to watch Norway's new crown prince while he makes snow images or coasts, for otherwise this lad, three years old, might be kissed to death by the crowds in the parks where he takes his outings. As yet it is rather difficult for Prince Olaf to converse with his playmates with fluency, as he is less proficient in Norwegian than in English, but even at that he manages to get on fairly well with the children who come to entertain him.

Belgian Girl's Invention.

Mlle. Ernesta Carston Di Luls, a Belgian girl, 15 years old, has just patented an invention which it is claimed will revolutionize many kinds of traction. A turntable fixed by any vehicle is the origin of her idea, and by means of her device any vehicle—automobile, car, cart, etc.—driven by any power can at once reverse. Belgian government engineers are considering the young inventor's scheme with a view to purchasing the rights for their country.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Senator Hale talks like a statesman with a re-election impending.

England ought to realize how Spain feels about her keeping open houses for anarchists.

The Duma seems determined to convince the Czar that he has not doubled his joys by halving his responsibilities.

It remains now for some muck-rakers to show that the Beef Trust and the Cattle Combine were officered by the same people.

Congress seems determined to pass the free alcohol bill and put the Standard Oil Company to the trouble of controlling the output.

Mr. Richard Canfield is making a surprising howl over parting with a little of his money, considering how easily he came by all of it.

It is to be presumed that those Mexican strikers at Cananea were very careful to ascertain that their cartridges were made by union labor.

It looks as tho' the only way Congress could ever be sure of a Utah Senator's morals would be by having him come from somewhere else.

It has been said that the Chicago packers utilize all of the pig except the squeal. But it looks as tho' they would now have the chance to use even that.

If they will just keep up the wrangle over the type of canal a little longer, someone may invent a flying machine that will render the canal a superfluity.

From the inhumanity that the packers display in handling their cattle before they are killed, it is easy to believe almost anything about their methods afterwards.

The Standard Oil Company has now petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for a hearing in which to show a few cases where it was not actively dishonest.

The court has decided that Mr. Perkins was not guilty of larceny in disbursing other people's funds. It would be a convenience for financiers if the courts would set some minimum limit where plain stealing commences.

As the time is drawing near for the county primaries, which will be held on August 4, we are informed that the friends of Mr. Swayer are gaining ground every day. The expressions heard at the county seat the forepart of the week seemed to indicate that the old-time friends of the present county clerk are deserting him on account of his dictatorship in the make-up of some of the committees on the board of supervisors.

True to his threat when he found that the legislation contemplated by the Beveridge Amendment for proper inspection of the meat products of the Chicago packing houses was being blocked in its passage through, President Roosevelt has sent to the Capitol the report of his own two commissioners Messrs. Neill and Reynolds who had made the tour of the houses when reports of their unsanitary condition were brought to him. If anyone expected the report to be an anti-climax after all the disgusting stories that had been printed about Chicago conditions, they were disappointed. The report is some degrees worse than anything that has been written even by the most sensational newspapers. It is not sensational in tone. In fact it is deadly cold and precise, prefaced by the statement that 'the many offers of testimony had been made to the commissioners, they were compelled to decline them and that the report as submitted was simply what they had seen with their own eyes and not what they had been told by any witness interested or otherwise. The President by way of comment on this report says that he has already ordered that the inspection labels bearing the government certificate shall only be placed on such meat packets as have been actually inspected and shall state merely that the animal when slaughtered was inspected and found fit for food. But he says that unless effective legislation is secured, he will be compelled to order that no government inspection label shall be used on any canned products hereafter. This would be a most serious blow to the packers and unless they have more temerity even than they have been credited with, they will see that they have gone too far in attempting to influence legislation and will come into camp lest a worse thing befall them. But while the government is attending to the internal economy of the packing houses and endeavoring to clean them up, it might be well to put in a word for the poor beasts whose ultimate destination is the noisome packing district of Chicago. The humane society all over the country for years have called attention to the conditions preceding the slaughter of the animals in Chicago. They have shown time and again that the cattle are transported long distances without food or water, burning mad with thirst, thrown down, legs broken, gored and trampled, all that a few cents might be saved to the cattle raisers in their transportation. The simple remedy for all this is to break up the great central killing houses and have the cattle slaughtered and inspected where they are raised, shipping the carcasses where necessary for treatment in the canning and packing establishments.

BLEACHING THE HORSE.

Dealer Tells About Some of the Shrewd Tricks of His Trade.

The horse had a glass eye, an artificial ear, gold filled teeth, a bleached tail and mane and touched up cheeks. He was a showy, handsome animal at that, says the Baltimore Herald.

"Hoss fakin' we call it," said the dealer. "It's plastic surgeon work, or beauty doctorin'. We do the same thing to the hoss what the beauty doctor does to mankind."

"Why shouldn't we bleach a nag's tail, mane and forelock when that there silver hue is pop'lar? Why shouldn't we reinforce a thin and ratty tail, or make good a lost ear, or touch out a defect here and there with a bit of paint or acid?"

"You've seen many a coal black horse and many a snow white one, I'll swear—each perfect, the black without a spot of white and vice versa. You bet, though, nature had given them black a spot of color somewhere, and she'd did the same by the white also. To remedy her error us fakars had stepped in, and with a camel's-hair brush and a small can of paint we have made the animals perfect and increased their market value about 40 per cent."

Diving for a Wife.

In many of the Greek islands diving for sponges forms a considerable part of the occupation of the inhabitants. The natives make it a trade to gather these, and their income from this source is far from contemptible. In one of the islands a girl is not permitted to marry until she has brought up a certain number of sponges, and given proof of her skill by taking them from a certain depth. But in some of the islands this custom is reversed. The father of a marriageable daughter bestows her on the best diver among her suitors. He who can stay longest in the water and bring up the biggest cargo of sponges marries the maid.

Was Wasting Away.

The following letter from Robert R. Watts of Salem, Mo., is instructive. "I have been troubled with kidney disease for the last five years. I lost flesh and never felt well and doctored with leading physicians and tried all remedies suggested without relief. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and less than two bottles completely cured me and I am now sound and well." Sold by J. H. Swan.

Quaint Island.

Jethou Island, off which the steamer Courier foundered, is by far the smallest of the Channel Islands, and boasts the distinction of being the smallest inhabited island in Europe, having, indeed, only one dwelling house upon it. It has a population of about seven souls. It has no road or pathway or post. At the last census more than half the population of the island was absent, having gone into Guernsey market with the butter and cream from the Jethou cows. The weather became bad, and the visitors had perforce to remain at Guersey during the census time.

On the first indication of kidney trouble, stop it by taking Foley's Kidney Cure. Sold by J. H. Swan.

Poles of Paper.

Serviceable telegraph poles can, it is found, be constructed of paper. Such poles are made of paper pulp, in which borax, tallow, etc., are mixed in small quantities. The pulp is cast in a mold with a core in the center, and forms a hollow rod of the desired length. The paper poles are said to be lighter and stronger than those of wood, and to be unaffected by the sun, rain, dampness or any of the other causes which shorten the life of a wooden pole.

PACKING HOUSES ARE CLEANING UP

PRESIDENT SENDS REPORT TO CHAIRMAN OF HOUSE COMMITTEE.

Confidential Agent of Executive Tells of Improvements Being Made in the Workrooms of the Big Plants at the Stockyards.

Washington, June 9.—In response to a request from the house committee on agriculture, President Roosevelt Friday forwarded to Representative Wadsworth, the chairman of that committee, the report made to him by a committee of the department of agriculture regarding conditions in the Chicago meat packing houses. Accompanying the report was a letter from the president, in which he points out that there is no conflict in substance between the Neill-Reynolds report and that of the agricultural department experts.

The president quotes a letter received from a most competent and trustworthy witness in Chicago, to the effect that the packing house proprietors are manifesting almost "a humorous haste to clean up, repave and even to plan for future changes." New toilet rooms are being provided, with additional dressing rooms and clean towels. The report says that "the haste towards reform would have been amusing if it were not so nearly tragic."

Following is the text of the letter of the president to Chairman Wadsworth:

Text of President's Letter.

"In accordance with your request I send you herewith the two reports of inspection by the committee appointed by the department of agriculture of April 5 and 12. This committee had already been appointed when I notified the secretary that I desired that such a commission should be appointed in order to make the investigation. Subsequent complaints to me and the consideration of complaints already made showed that the charges were not only against the packing houses, but also to a certain extent reflected upon the action of the government inspectors, and I came to the conclusion that it was best to have an investigation by outside individuals who could not be charged with being in any way interested in the matter.

"Some of the ground traversed by Messrs. Neill and Reynolds is not touched upon in the report of the committee of the agricultural department. As to the ground covered in common by the reports of the two investigating committees, there is no conflict in substance as to the important matters.

"To show the immediate and extraordinary change for the better which the mere fact of their investigation is already bringing about in the condition of the packing houses in Chicago, it is only necessary to instance the following portions of a letter received from a most competent and trustworthy witness in Chicago:

Awakening of Packingtown.

"On Monday I began a tour of all the great packing houses—going first to Libby's, then to Swift's.

"Tuesday, all the morning discussed changes that ought to be made and caught a glimpse of the awakening at Armour's. In the afternoon visited the plant with the superintendent.

"Wednesday I rested and contemplated the 'awakening of Packing town.' It is miraculous. Thursday did Nelson Morris, with the superintendent. Nelson Morris has done much to make things better. By the time the next inspecting party arrives they will have still more new lavatories, toilet rooms, dressing rooms, etc. Cuspidors everywhere, and signs prohibiting spitting. In most, the awakening seemed to come by force from without. There was the slightest indication that the 'still small voice' was at work also.

Notices Improvements.

"On every hand there was indication of an almost humorous haste to clean up, repave and even to plan for future changes. Brand new toilet rooms, new dressing rooms, new towels, etc., etc.

"Swift's and Armour's were both so cleaned up that I was compelled to cheer them on their way by expressing my pleasure at the changes. The sausage girls were moved upstairs, where they could get sun and light, they to have dressing rooms, etc. I asked for showers and lockers for the casing workers at Armour's, and got a promise that they would put them in."

"The canning and stuffing room, chip beef and beef extract at Armour's seemed really quite good. In all of these rooms the girls work.

"At Libby's the girls are to be put into a blue calico uniform, which they will buy at half price. They are putting in toilet rooms which they say are temporary, and that when the building is remodeled they will have these put in a better place.

"The haste towards reform would have been amusing if it were not so nearly tragic.

"They tried to win my help on the ground that loss of foreign trade would mean hardship for the workers in my neighborhood, and I must say I do share this fear, but I cannot see the wisdom of my coming out publicly and saying that I saw indications of an awakening, for I want the changes to be radical and permanent, even though we all have to suffer for the present."

Slow Also in Death.

Snails are slow even when it comes to dying. One well-known naturalist who had mounted a shell upon a card was surprised to find, four years later, that the warm water employed in soaking the shell off the mount had revived the inmate, which he had long since supposed to be dried and dead. Several specimens in another collection were revived in a similar manner after they had lain in a drawer for some 15 years. These had not been glued to a card, but had been left lying loose, and, though frequently handled, had shown no signs of life. They were thrown into tepid water with the idea of cleaning out the shells, but to the surprise of the owner the snails were found creeping about the basin when he returned to complete the task.

The cement block machine which is at present located at the gravel-pit on the Allen farm at Grass Lake has been sold to a company formed by J. C. James, Jr., Charles Blunt, N. Burnett and Horace Middendorf. We hope that this industry will find encouragement in our neighborhood, as this style of building blocks has found favor in many other towns before being introduced here. We understand that the cement blocks in stock are retained by Mr. T. T. Armstrong for the present, he being the one who introduced the industry in this community.

There is a change in the time card on the Libertyville branch of the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric Railroad Company line that should be noted. Cars now leave Lake Bluff for the west 55 minutes after every hour, beginning with 6:55 a. m. and continuing until 9:55 p. m. The service is then 10:35 and 11:15 for the last two cars. East bound cars leave Rockefeller every 25 minutes after the hour, race track every 31 minutes after the hour, Libertyville, every 33 minutes after the hour and Roundout every 40 minutes after the hour, making Lake Bluff 50 minutes after the hour. A half hour schedule is planned for special occasions. The forty minute schedule is changed because of the danger of operating the cars at such speed.

The assessor returned the tax books to the county office on Tuesday of last week. The assessed value of the Personal Property of the town of Antioch is estimated at $79,225 and that of the Real Estate at $262,761 which happens to be just $1.00 more than last year.

Island Classified as Ship.

The island of Ascension, in the Atlantic, is the sole property of the British admiralty authorities, and is borne on the navy list as a vessel, being classed as a tender to one of his majesty's ships of war. The island is governed by a naval captain, and the men stationed there are subject to the same rules as they would be on board ship. There is no private property in land, so that there are no rents, rates, or taxes to bother about.

During the summer kidney irregularities are often caused by excessive drinking or being over heated. Attend to the kidneys at once by using Foley's Kidney Cure. Sold by J. H. Swan.

World's Oldest Tree.

The oldest tree in the world is said to be the famous dragon tree of Teneriffe, which is estimated to be from 4,000 to 6,000 years of age. This wonder of the plant world was 70 feet or more in height until the year 1819, when, during a terrific storm, one of the large branches was broken off. A similar storm in 1867 stripped the trunk of its remaining branches, and left it standing alone.

Constipation makes the cold drag along. Get it out of you. Take Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar cough syrup. Contains no opiates. Sold by J. H. Swan.

Complacency.

"Dere ain't nobody dat can't brag a little bit about something," said Meandering Mike. "Dat's right," answered Flooding Pete. "Take you an' me, fur instance. We never get mixed up in no labor riots, do we?"—Washington Star.

Buy Hair at Auction?

At any rate, you seem to be getting rid of it on auction-sale principles: "going, going, g-o-n-e!" Stop the auction with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It certainly checks falling hair; no mistake about this. It acts as a regular medicine; makes the scalp healthy. Then you must have healthy hair, for it's nature's way.

The best kind of a testimonial—Sold for over sixty years.

TRUE FISH STORIES FROM GRASS LAKE

There was something doing at Grass Lake, last week, when Mr. Baldwin, a plain, common, member of the Genus City Cuss, brought into Paddock's Bluff Lake Resort one evening, 22 black bass, the result of one afternoon's angling.

His host, Bates, almost threw a somersault in his anxiety to get a photograph of the catch to show to other and disgruntled guests, when they came in empty handed.

Mr. Baldwin, after flashing his prize in the astonished and envious eyes of a few favored guests, disappeared in the ice house, to emerge later and again disappear in the mysterious depths of his own room where the curious were unable to enter, and a deep air of mystery prevailed every where.

"Have you seen Baldwin's fish?" "S-h-h—Where did he catch them?" "S-h-h—He doesn't want the other fishermen to catch on."

Just at dark Jim Johnson was seen carrying two long bamboo poles toward the lake, but when approached, he hastily walked away. It was noticed however that his boat was ready for immediate departure.

Charley Herman sent over a messenger for particulars but no one could give him any information.

Late that night in Frank Savage's emporium, Mr. Lewis Paddock and uncle Jerry Savage were seen holding a whispered conversation, behind a stack of sacks of flour, which looked very mysterious to the uninitiated. When asked if they had heard of Mr. Baldwin's great catch, they nodded an affirmative, but were deep to give out any inside facts, if they had any. Of course great confidence is placed in these veterans of the life and gun, by the amateurs, and they were questioned very closely.

"What do you think of the prospect for a good fishing day tomorrow?" Mr. Paddock was asked.

Lew felt in his pocket for a match, deliberately scratched it on the sole of his shoe, drew a few vigorous puffs on his pipe, till he got it in a glow, tilted his chair back against the wall, crossed his legs and made answer.

"I don't know."

"Did Mr. Baldwin use live bait or frogs this afternoon?"

Lew pulled his hat over his eyes, changed the position of his game leg, gently stroked his whiskers and answered.

"Spoonhook, I guess."

"Don't you think it very unwise, Mr. Paddock to take so many fish in one afternoon? Don't you think it will have a tendency to deplete the waters, making fish scarce and fishing poor, so that the ordinary fisherman will not get what is coming to him? Won't this have a tendency to keep people away from your hotel?"

Lew straitened up his chair, knocked the ashes from his pipe and placed it carefully in his pocket, cleared his throat and expectorated into the sand box and answered.

"Plenty left."

What is your idea, Mr. Savage of a tenderfoot coming up here and taking out twenty-two black bass in one afternoon? "There ain't no sense in catching so gol darn many," uncle Jerry answered. When I go out a fishing, I get two or three fish, then I come home, sometimes I don't get none but I come home anyway. Fishin' ain't what it used to be when we used to fish for market, then you could go out and get a string of fish worth while.

I member one day when the shootin was poor, I thought I'd go fishin. so I went out in Lake Marlar, and by cracky, how they did take bolt. I pulled in for five young bass as fast as I could throw my hook. Sometimes a big bass would see the frog comin and jump clean out of the water to meet it. an' I'd hook him and pull him in, without his ever touchin the water at all. Darny, there was a terrible lunge and splash after my frog, an' I knew I'd hooked a big feller. I's over by the outlet when he got on. I didn't darst to pull him right up he's so blamed big, so I jist let him tow the boat around the lake till he got tired, then I got him up alongside, an' tried to roll him in, but, by cracky he's the slipperiest fish I ever see. I fooled around with that pickerel all the afternoon and air. I couldn't get him into the boat no way.

I'd got sixty-nine bass fore the big one got on, an' I wanted to make it a hundred, but there I was, wastin all the afternoon on one blamed ole pickerel, so I up an' cut the line, an' let him go, never thinkin that that was the only hook I had. I've always been sorry, though, that I couldn't weigh that fish. I guess there ain't never been another caught round these lakes that'd beat him.

"No other time."

At this juncture uncle Jerry deserted to look around the room and found it deserted, and Frank was putting out the lights, so sadly shaking his head at the impatience of youth, he settled his hat firmly in place and solemnly strode out into the night.

Long Log Jam.

Something that has not occurred for a number of years in the St. John river, in Maine, happened the other day. There was a jam of logs 11 miles long, in the vicinity of St. Leonard's, said to contain 45,000,000 feet of last year's logs. The water got such a head on that it raised the entire jam and they started and never stopped until they landed in the Fredericton booms. So the entire 45,000,000 feet were carried that distance without costing one dollar for driving and netting the firm which was doing the driving the sum of $15,000.

Deadly Serpent Bites.

are as common in India as are stomach and liver disorders with us. For the latter however there is a sure remedy: Electric Bitters; the great restorative medicine of which S. A. Brown, of Bennettville, S. C., says: "They restored my wife to perfect health, after years of suffering with dyspepsia and a chronically torpid liver." Electric Bitters cure chills and fever, malaria, biliousness, lame back, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. Sold on guarantee by J. H. Swan. Price 50c.

Tightwad in Heaven.

Some of the tightwads of this town will feel mighty cheap says the Concordia Kansan when they are taken to heaven, and from their perch on a high stool, where they will play on a golden harp with silver strings, they can look down and see some other fellow riding around this town in an automobile bought with the money they could not take along with them to their eternal home.

Ten Years in Bed.

R. A. Gray, J. P., Oakville, Ind., writes: "For ten years I was confined to my bed with disease of my kidneys. It was so severe that I could not move part of the time. I consulted the very best medical skill available, but could get no relief until Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended to me. It has been a Godsend to me." Sold by J. H. Swan.

Motor Boats in Venice.

Motor boats of all sorts are becoming more and more numerous on the Venetian canals, threatening to displace the old-time gondola. The gondoliers are much disturbed. In a dispute between two of them and two electric launch men lately the latter were stabbed, one fatally.

Alpine Telephone.

Italy is about to begin the construction of a telephone service in Alpine altitudes for the use of climbers who need assistance.

Good Season for Icebergs.

There is something wrong up around the north pole. Apparently it's warmer up there this season than for a long time, for never in the memory of sea captains has the North Atlantic been spiced with so many icebergs. They have been chipping off from the great polar ice fields like frosting from a cake and have become such a menace to navigation that a half dozen steamship lines have issued orders to the commanders of their ships to change their courses to a more southerly one. This means that most of the liners will hereafter abandon the short route followed during the summer months.

Thousand annually bear witness to the efficiency of Early Risers. These pleasant, reliable little pills have long borne a reputation second to none as a laxative and cathartic. They are as staple as bread in millions of homes. Pleasant but effective. Will promptly relieve constipation without griping. Sold by J. H. Swan.

Chirp of the Cricket.

The chirping of crickets on a hot summer night falls into a rhythmic beat, and this beat is a very accurate thermometer. In the latitude of Boston, according to Outing, the crickets chirp about 50 times a minute when the temperature is at 50 degrees. They add four chirps a minute for every degree above that.

Warning.

If you have kidney or bladder trouble and do not use Foley's Kidney Cure, you will only have yourself to blame for the results, as it positively cures all forms of kidney and bladder diseases. Sold by J. H. Swan.

Perfume Cones.

M. Delétrain, of Geneva, has combined certain materials, put together in the form of a small solid cone, which, when dissolved in petrol of benzine, destroy the odors of burnt gases, and leave an agreeable perfume behind.

No good health unless the kidneys are sound. Foley's Kidney Cure will make the kidneys right. Sold by J. H. Swan.

Cow-Milking Record.

In a paper read before a meeting of sanitary inspectors at Sheffield, Mr. J. S. Lloyd, F. R. C. V. S., advocated the milking of cows by machinery. He described one or two types of apparatus in use, and mentioned that by one of them a girl of 17, in Glasgow, milked 34 cows in an hour and a quarter, with the assistance of a boy to carry the milk pails away.

Nautical Terms.

Rear Admiral Evans has been so long at sea that he is liable to use nautical terms on inopportune occasions. A few evenings ago he boarded an automobile at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York to go to the pier, where his launch was waiting to take him on board the flagship. He settled himself in the cushions and called to the chauffeur: "On deck there—above or?" The admiral had dined.

Interesting to Asthma Sufferers.

Daniel Bante of Otterville, Iowa, writes: "I have had asthma for three or four years and have tried about all the cough and asthma cures in the market and have received treatment from physicians in New York and other cities, but got very little benefit until I tried Foley's Honey and Tar which gave me immediate relief and I have never been without it in my house. I sincerely recommend it to all." Sold by J. H. Swan.

Coke Oven Waste.

It is calculated that in making coke in the common beehive ovens used in the United States, between 350,000 and 400,000 tons of ammonium sulphate, every pound of it valuable for fertilizing purposes, is wasted yearly. In Germany most of the coke is made in improved ovens which save this by-product.

The sworn statement of the manufacturers protects you from opiates in Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar—the cough syrup that drives the cold out of your system. Sold by J. H. Swan.

"Heart Within and God O'erhead."

How many things might have been a subject for fools to discuss. How things are now, what they may be made to be in the future, are the only things worth talking about.—Medical Talk.

Large and Small Eggs.

Of British birds, the guillemot lays the largest egg in proportion to its size, and the cuckoo the smallest. The guillemot is about the size of the raven, but its egg is nearly five inches in length.

Chronic bronchial troubles and summer coughs can be quickly relieved and cured by Foley's Honey and Tar. Sold by J. H. Swan.

An Observation.

"I don't," remarked Mrs. Upton, "like these terribly observant people who never let anything escape them. They're apt to be disagreeable and uncomfortable. Now, there's Mr. Snooper; he observes everything but the proprieties."—Cleveland Leader.

One Man's Evil

By EFFIE ROWLAND

"If I had not so much at stake," he said to himself, as the handsome boy came more in the direction of Regent's Park, "things might be different. I might even see some way of changing ideas. It would give me great pleasure to kick Gerald! But I don't stand alone; I must fight to win. Money is the only thing that will give me Sylvia, and money I must have—not in little sums, but money such as has come to Gerald Tenby; and now it is in my hand! To-day, for the first time in my life, I have felt myself a rich man. Gerald dare not refuse me anything I ask—and must I see all this for me? Never! never!"

His heart was beating wildly as the cab drew up at the door of a neat little villa, and his brain seemed on fire. He opened the garden gate and hurried up the path, carrying his flowers in his hand. The maid who admitted him looked at him with reproach.

"The dinner is all spoiled," she said. "Madame thought you were not coming." He pushed aside some silken curtains and entered the small drawing room, heavy with scent. A woman was seated in a low chair by the open window.

In the dim light she might have passed for a mere girl, and yet there were those in the world who declared that Sylvia Castella was a woman who would never see the age of forty again.

She rose as Stanton appeared, and advanced into the room. The lamp light fell upon her, and revealed her in all her strange beauty.

The face was oval, and the features classical; the head, with its mass of red-gold hair, well poised on the shoulders. She was not very tall, yet she gave the impression of height. The lines of her figure were superb.

Looking at her as she stood there now, she would have seemed the very last woman in the world to have achieved notoriety on the burlesque stage; yet she was Sylvia Castella, the woman who reigned as queen in one of the smartest London theaters; a woman whose name was on every one's lips, whose pictures were scattered everywhere, and whose whole life was a subject of interest to the world at large.

Such was the woman that George Stanton worshipped with a love that was capable of beautifying even such a nature as his.

"Why do you come here?" she had asked him over and over again. "Why do you waste your time? Have I not told you that I want to have nothing to do with you?"

And George Stanton had always made her the same reply:

"I come because I cannot stay away. I come because I love you, as none of these other men you smile upon could love you. I know I am poor, a vagrant nuisance; but wait, Sylvia! Only give me time. I swear to you I shall be rich!"

"You are a fool!" she said to him, with a roughness that was new to her. "Do you suppose that I am worth such a love as this. You should be wiser, George. If money has come to you, as I must realize it has come, you should choose some other woman to become your wife. I may break your heart, you know."

Stanton rose and, crossing the room, threw himself beside her on his knees.

"Be my wife!" he said.

But she drew back with a laugh.

"When you can settle a hundred thousand pounds upon me," she said, "perhaps I will do what you ask."

Stanton rose to his feet. The words she said rang in his ears. He went back and sat in his chair like a man dazed. But little by little, out of the bewilderment of his brain, there framed one thought, one determination.

He knew now the price he must pay for his wife. Before another week had gone, he said to himself between his teeth, the money she had mentioned in jest should be hers in reality, though he stained his hands in blood to obtain it!

CHAPTER IX.

Before Antonio had left her room the next morning a little note was brought to her by Lady Betty's maid.

"Come and speak to me. I have something of importance to say to you," was penciled on the scrap of paper.

Antonio sent word to say she would obey Lady Betty's summons. It was the first time she had ever been invited to enter the large, luxurious bedroom.

"I want you to give me a promise," she said; and Antonio had looked at her a little in surprise.

"What promise, Lady Betty?" she asked.

"It is a very simple one, yet a very wise and necessary one, dear Antonio, you are so young, and you are so much in love, that cold common sense and discretion do not even enter into your mind. I want you to promise me that you will say nothing about your friendship with Hubert Tenby for the moment. I ask this for your own sake entirely. I am not going to judge him one way or another. Since you who know him so well declare him to be innocent, I am only glad to believe that he is innocent; but I am not at all the world, and Hubert has a very hard task before him to clear his name. As your uncle's wife, Antonio, I have felt that it is my duty to urge you to say nothing about Hubert one way or another till everything is arranged and your engagement can be made public."

"I give you this promise very easily," said Antonio in her earnest way. "I do not know that I should have spoken about Hubert even to you, had I not felt that I must give you an explanation of my absence last night. I had thought of telling Uncle Edward that Hubert has come back. I do not think there would be any harm in that."

"Dear Edward is the last person in the world that should be told anything so important. My dear Antonio, you cannot imagine what an absent-minded creature he is! I myself have more than once sharply regretted having spoken to your uncle on certain subjects. He does not mean to make mischief; he is so good—such a dear old thing! But he makes them. Well, I am glad that you see the necessity of silence, Antonio. It is only fair to Hubert that he should clear himself, and until he does so, dear as he is to you, you must not let yourself be publicly associated with him. I am quite sure," Lady Betty said, meekly, "that he himself would wish this."

"I thank you very much, Lady Betty. Hubert will clear himself. Of that I am quite sure. Whether the world knows of my engagement or not is a matter of complete indifference to me. But, as I am in your house, and you seem to think it wise that I should say nothing, I will do what you wish."

"Thank you, dear," Lady Betty said, affectionately.

Gerald Tenby was already in town. He had traveled up the night before, and when Lady Betty's little note was handed in by the footman at the door of his chambers he was pacing to and fro in his room. His thoughts were all of Stanton. A wild and impotent anger raged in his heart.

Old Sir Maurice was dead; Hubert lost, and perhaps dead also; and he—Gerald—reigned at Mill Cross Court. And yet the very moment of his triumph, the same hour that saw him transformed into one of England's greatest men, saw also the commencement of a bitterness that would eat to the very heart of that greatness.

Gerald felt sick as he conjured up what lay before him in the future. He had said himself with an enemy that would cost him very dear.

As this thought passed through his mind, the door opened and Stanton came in. The two men stood and looked at each other for an instant; then Stanton spoke:

"I thought I should find you here. I have something of importance to say to you."

Gerald's lips curled with a sneer.

"Another check, I suppose?"

"I have only just begun," Stanton said.

"Before we separate to-day, Tenby, I shall lay before you a certain proposition by which you pass over to me a hundred thousand pounds. I am not joking, Tenby. This sum of money must be mine before the week is out, or—"

"Or what?" demanded Gerald Tenby.

"What will you do, friend Stanton, if I refuse? You may be able to hurt me socially—yet I doubt it; for the world, like you, loves money. I am Sir Gerald Tenby, and I have power."

"I think you will do this," said Stanton, and his voice was full of significance.

"I have something to tell you, Gerald. Hubert Tenby is alive! Hubert Tenby is in England!"

There was silence in the room—a prolonged silence—in which the sound of a knock at the door broke almost sharply. Sir Gerald's man servant advanced into the room.

"This gentleman, sir," he said, "will take no denial. I told him you were engaged, but he refuses to wait."

He turned as he spoke toward a figure that had followed him through the doorway.

It was Hubert Tenby who stood there.

CHAPTER X.

While Antonio and Hubert were waiting together in so strange a manner, Ben Coop had been waiting for his "boy" at the hotel with a little anxiety at his heart.

It was a strange experience for the man who had lived so many years a wild, free life to find himself set up in a small room in a London house.

Ben Coop felt that he breathed with difficulty. Had it not been for Hubert he would have turned around instantly, and have gone back to that little cottage out in the beautiful country.

He felt ill at ease. It was the first time Hubert had left him since they had linked their lots together. Hubert had gone in search of clothes.

"We are such odd-looking people, you and I, Ben," he had said, with his smile that came so rarely. "I must make myself a little civilized."

"You will always look what you are," Ben Coop had answered to this. "I'll sit and read the paper awhile, and think out what best steps to take first."

Ben paced restlessly to and fro, and when at last Hubert came back he turned with something like a sob in his throat.

"Ay, but I was beginning to get most anxious about you, young master!" he said. "Something has happened?"

"Two things, Ben. One the greatest joy, the other the greatest sorrow the human heart can experience. Ben, we meet with disaster before we start. My father is dead!"

"No, Mr. Hubert!" said Ben, involuntarily. "Don't tell me that!"

"It is true, Ben—most true. I had it from the lips of one who, though humble, is as blessed as if she were an angel. Ben, I must sit down and tell you all. My heart weeps, and yet it sings. You, who have known love, will perhaps understand."

"Who is it, lad?" Ben asked gently.

"She is the only child of Lord Marchmont. You must remember him."

"Ay, that I do right well. I mind when his wife died. A sweet creature she was, Mr. Hubert, and his lordship just worshipped her. I did hear say he could not stand the sight of the child because it cost the mother her life, and because it was a girl."

"All this is right," said Hubert, "and it is Antonio I love. I have loved her ever since she has been a little child. I don't know that I realized this love before my run came; but my thoughts of her, my memories of her, made the only touch of light in the blackness of those two years. And to think that I should have seen her to-day, Ben, the first day I set foot in England. We met so naturally; and as my eyes went to hers I knew all that was in her heart. Does it not seem wonderful, Ben?"

When they met at breakfast next morning Ben put forward his scheme.

"Your father being dead," he said, "it is right and just to yourself, lad, that you should claim what belongs to you. The man who calls himself Sir Gerald Tenby is wearing your shoes. Mayhap he believes that you are dead; but he must be told the truth. There must be boldness. You've got innocence in your heart, and can look any man in the face. That's more, I'll swear, than Sir Gerald Tenby can do. I read in the newspaper this morning that he is ill at Mill Cross Court."

"Do you suggest that we should go to Mill Cross?" Hubert asked. "I thought it would be good if I were to go to my father's lawyers."

"Ay," Ben agreed, "that would be very good."

"I am going to send you to Antonio. For myself, I don't remember exactly where these lawyers are to be found."

"Give me your note," Ben said, with a smile. "I'll be the postman. We will meet here in a couple of hours' time."

They parted with a hand-clasp, and Hubert stood and watched Ben's great, big form pass down the street out of sight.

"What a heart of gold!" he said to himself.

A smile lingered on his lips; then he sighed and turned to his business of the day. Glancing through the directory, he found it difficult to fix on the locality in which he should find the lawyers who had worked for his father.

He knew that they had offices in a somewhat fashionable part, not in the usual legal neighborhood, and so he determined to walk and find these offices by inquiries.

It was while he was making these inquiries in a small but evidently old-established tobacco-shop that a name was spoken that sent the blood coursing like fire through his veins. One of the assistants in the shop was giving an order to a messenger.

"These cigars are to be taken to Sir Gerald Tenby's rooms at once."

"Can you tell me where I can find Sir Gerald Tenby?" asked Hubert, and as he uttered the name of the man who had ruined his heart beat wildly.

The assistant gave him the address at once. With a word of thanks, Hubert turned and left the shop. All at once a sudden resolution seized him. He would go to Gerald, he would throw in this man's teeth the accusation of treachery. He was no longer the foolish boy he had been two years before. It would be a case of man to man; and, as Gerald had not spared him, he would show no mercy. He came to a pause only when he stood at the door of the luxurious suite of rooms that was Gerald Tenby's London home. The valet who opened the door looked at him curiously.

"Sir Gerald is engaged," he said. But Hubert swept him on one side.

"He will see me," he answered curtly; and the valet understood at once that this man belonged to the world of those whom he served. He opened the door, making the apology that has been already set down, and Hubert followed him into the room.

The three men within that room stood in silence till the servant had withdrawn. It was Gerald who found his voice first.

"What are you doing here?" he said hoarsely. "By what right do you come into my room like this?"

Stanton had quickly recovered himself.

"My dear Gerald," he said hurriedly, "don't forget that this is your cousin."

He turned as he spoke, and stretched out his hand to Hubert.

"You must forgive us if we looked startled. You have been supposed to be dead for more than a year."

Hubert ignored the outstretched hand.

"Would you kindly leave us," he said to Stanton. "I have things to say to Gerald Tenby that I prefer to speak alone."

Stanton passed out of the room with a good assumption of unconcern; but when he was alone in the passage he stood and leaned against the wall.

Fate was hurrying on the crisis! What did Hubert Tenby mean by coming at such a moment? This robbed him of his strongest weapon. With the threat of Hubert's coming to hold over Gerald he would have got all he wanted. Now—George Stanton looked about him nervously. Was it vain?

He pulled himself together suddenly. A door at the end of the passage was opened, and the valet came toward him.

Unconscious of Fame.

George Grote, the famous author of the "History of Greece," long the standard on that subject, was a man of great simplicity, and was wholly unconscious of his own celebrity. Several anecdotes illustrative of this fact are given in "Some Famous Women of Wit and Beauty," one of whom is Mrs. Grote.

While Mr. Grote was walking in the park he would perhaps notice that one or two persons looked at him with some attention. He would at once turn to his wife in alarm.

"Have I got any dirt on my face, Harriet? Is there anything the matter with my hat?" and he would clutch his head-gear with both hands.

"Why are those people looking at me?"

Mrs. Grote's proud answer was, "Because you are George Grote, that's all!"

Once when he was on a visit to Cambridge, Grote wished to see the professor of natural history, but was told that the professor was so busy dissecting something that he could not be interrupted, "strong magnifying power, powerful light, shirt-sleeves up, cannot be bothered with anybody." The modest historian would have retired, but his wife persisted that it was Mrs. Grote who wished to see the professor.

"What!" he cried. "Mrs. Grote! Give me my coat. I must wash my hands." In a minute he had transformed himself, and would not let them go for two hours.

FARMS AND FARMERS

An Eight-Sided Barn.

Here is a plan for a barn of the eight-sided or octagon shape. This octagonal barn is 25 feet on each side, providing accommodation for about fifty head of cattle. There is a considerable gain in floor space when the octagonal form is used instead of the square form, the same amount of wall enclosing a greater number of square feet. The main objection to an eight-sided barn is that it is difficult to fill with a hay fork or sheaf carrier. This may be largely overcome by erecting a gable on one of the sides of the roof and running a track in from that height, which may be extended to within 20 feet of the opposite wall. The roof requires to be self-supporting and to secure this the plates should be bolted together at the corners and held by a band of iron 4 feet long, bent to fit and solidly bolted so that the corners can never spread. In the stable part the larger cattle should be assigned to the outer circle, the smaller ones to the inner row. One feeding alley serves for the two rows, and a circular track can be arranged for carrying slugs. In order to get sufficient light there requires to be an almost continuous window about three feet above the ground.—Montreal Star.

Fumigating the Orchard.

The insect tax upon this country's agricultural interests is something stupendous. Indeed, were it not for the ravages of insects, great and small, the life and profits of the horticulturist would be so attractive as to completely change the present attitude toward their occupation. The government experts are doing an enormous amount of educational work in determining the exact organisms that are responsible for each particular form of damage and the best method of combating same. Fumigation is one of the modern farmer's magic science wands by which, in a trice, he clears his crops of insect life that if not held eradicated would probably destroy his entire crop. In California immense balloonlike arrangements of canvas are used in fumigating fruit trees, and now a Texas inventor proposes to modify the plan, with the idea of making it available for smaller crops, such as cotton and corn. The appliance consists of a supporting truck for movement over the ground, generally by the use of horses, a combustion chamber for the formation of the fumes, or gases employed as fumigant, and a framework, adjustable as to heights, and a hood covering the whole.

Drought Rather than Moisture.

It is much easier for one to be independent of dry weather than of wet unless the soil is naturally wet, so that it may be pipe drained and thus get rid of the excessive moisture and this is an expensive operation, but, notwithstanding, a most desirable one in the end. Potato growers are perhaps more interested in the problem of how to battle with dry weather than growers of any other crop and, under normal conditions, the secret is simply to see that the soil is properly supplied with humus or vegetable matter.

It is folly, or will be found so after a few years, to attempt to grow potatoes on the same ground year after year or to grow them wholly by the aid of commercial fertilizers. Here is where it pays to make every possible effort to grow clover for getting heavy crops of clover under the soil will add the required humus, which, in connection with first-class seed, care and cultivation, will enable one to grow heavy crops of potatoes in normal seasons and better than your neighbor's in dry seasons.

This question of getting humus into the soil is one that must be met sooner or later by every farmer and especially by those who pin their faith very largely to commercial fertilizers.

Profit in Forest Thinning.

A bulletin entitled "Improvement Thinning" has been issued by the State forester of Massachusetts. The author shows that the growth on considerable areas can be improved and made more productive by the application of moderate thinning while the stands are in the process of development. Thin as often as the material to be removed will pay for its removal is the rule laid down as to how often to thin. As to the degree to which it is safe to thin, the cover should never be broken to such an extent that it will not close again in two or three years and cast a dense shade. In answer to the objection that is sometimes urged that such work is impracticable under existing conditions of the labor and wood market, the author refers to the fact that thinning has been done and is going on now in Massachusetts and neighboring States, and that it has not only paid for itself, but has in some instances yielded a net profit of from twenty-five cents to $2 on each cord of wood removed.

Prepare the Wool Well.

A wool grower sending wool to market in a heavy, dirty condition, leaving anything in the fleece to make more weight, and expecting to get more money is greatly mistaken. Buyers estimate the value of the clip by the net yield of clean wool. When growers do their best they secure for themselves the best results. The soundness of the fiber may be tested by stretching a small staple between the fingers. Staple 2 1/4 inches in length up, is classed

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Suffered Two Years—Relieved In Three Months.

M. C. B. FIZER, Mt. Sterling, Ky.

Writes:

"I have suffered with kidney and bladder trouble for ten years past."

"Last March I commenced using Peruna and continued for three months. I have not used it since, nor have I felt a pain."

"I believe that I am well and I therefore give my highest commendation to the curative qualities of Peruna."

Per-na for Kidney Trouble

Mrs. Geo. H. Simser, Grant, Ontario, Can., writes:

"I had not been well for about two years. I had kidney trouble, and, in fact, felt badly nearly all the time."

"This summer I got so very bad that I would try Peruna, so I bought a bottle and began at once to take it, and I am well."

"I took only two bottles of Peruna and one of Manalio, and no better than I have for some time."

"I feel that Peruna and Manalio made a different woman altogether. I bless the day I got the little book and read of your 'It is the Business of the Doctor to remove from the blood serious materials.' They may all the time, else the system suffers as times when they need a little aid."

Peruna is exactly this sort of aid. It has saved many people from disaster by rendering the kidneys at a time when they were to bear their own burdens."

Paderevski's Musical Bell.

Rosamond Johnson, of C. Johnson, composers of that old song, "Under the Bamboo Tree," once held a position as bellboy at Young's Hotel in Boston. This place once nearly lost, through taking the party of playing Paderevski's "M" for the grand pianist. Paderevski was staying at that hotel, had a bellboy, and young Johnson named the call.

Being so fond of music, he made up his mind to ask the grand composer and play to the "Minnut" for him; Paderevski could not understand him, then, and the boy thought from his speculations that he wished him to play it. So he sat down at the piano and commenced playing. Paderevski's manager happened to enter the room just then, and, enraged at the boy's presumption, threw him out of the room and went directly to the management and had him discharged.

As soon as he learned what had been done, Paderevski, who had been pleased with the lad's playing, sent for the manager of the hotel and had Johnson reinstated in his position.—Success Magazine.

BUILDING FOOD.

To Bring the Babies Around.

When a little human machine (or a large one) goes wrong, nothing is so important as the selection of food to bring it around again.

"My little baby, fifteen months old had pneumonia, then came brain fever, and no sooner had he got over these than he began to cut teeth and, being so weak, he was frequently thrown into convulsions," says a Colorado mother.

"I decided a change might help, so took him to Kansas City for a visit. When we got there he was so very weak when he would cry he would sink away and seemed like he would die."

"When I reached my sister's home she said immediately that we must feed him Grape-Nuts, and, although I had never used the food, we got some and for a few days gave him just the juice of Grape-Nuts and milk. He got stronger, so quickly we were soon feeding him the Grape-Nuts itself, and in a wonderfully short time he fattened right up and became strong and well."

"That showed me something worth knowing and, when later on my girl came, I raised her on Grape-Nuts and she is a strong, healthy baby and has been. You will see from the little photograph I send you what a strong, chubby youngster the boy is now, but he didn't look anything like that before we found this nourishing food. Grape-Nuts nourished him back to strength when he was so weak he couldn't keep any other food on his stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

All children can be built up to a more sturdy and healthy condition upon Grape-Nuts and cream. The food contains the elements nature demands, from which to make the soft gray lining in the nerve centers and brain. A well-fed brain and strong, sturdy nerves absolutely insure a healthy body.

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

At the rear a deflector curtain is provided, with a depending shield extending across the combustion chamber to deflect the fumes and force them into contact with the plants. With an apparatus of this general type it is possible to effectively and rapidly treat large numbers of plants, the deflector or hood extending over two full rows of plants.—Sacramento Bee.

Awake in Mexico.

Mexican farming interests are waking up under the example of their neighbors of the North, and a new school of agriculture is to be established under the charge of one of Luther Burbank's co-workers. This school is the first of the kind to be established in Mexico, and is located near the boundary line. The conditions there are similar to those in Texas and south California, and a high grade of agriculture may be expected under intelligent methods.

Rye for Pasture.

The early rye always shows itself soon after the weather begins to moderate in the spring, and some farmers usually then begin to use it for pasture. It is a mistake to use the rye too early, as it may cause scouring. It is very laxative in its effects, being watery, and a change from dry feed to young rye very early in the season may result in loss of milk.

Following the Flag.

When our soldiers went to Cuba and the Philippines, health was the most important consideration. Willis T. Morgan, retired Commissary Sergeant U. S. A., of Rural Route 1, Concord, N. H., says: "I was two years in Cuba and two years in the Philippines, and being subject to colds, I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption which kept me in perfect health. And now, in New Hampshire, we find it the best medicine in the world for coughs, colds, bronchial troubles and all lung diseases. Guaranteed at J. H. Swan. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
She Didn't Know.
"Don't you think," asked Mrs. Oldcastle, "that the new minister was somewhat recalcitrant last Sunday?" "I didn't know what it was at the time," replied her hostess as she toyed with her diamond studded fan, "but I do remember that his face looked kind of red and his eyes were sort of glassy. Still, we oughtn't to be too hard on the poor man. He might of taken it for the 'la grippe'."—Chicago Record Herald.
Noted Novelist Disabled.
George Meredith, it is said, will write no more novels. Though both legs were fractured in an accident some months ago, he is, when his age is considered, making what seems to be surprising progress.

MAKES STATEMENT TO THE PUBLIC

WAUKEGAN, ILL., June 11, 1906.
ANTIOCH NEWS,
ANTIOCH, ILL.

GENTLEMEN:—It having been brought to my attention that in one of the county newspapers stories have been published to the effect that my son James owned the farm on which we lived, that I had only the life use of this farm, and that my son James was wealthy and had inherited several thousand dollars ($12,000, I believe the story goes) from his grandfather (my father) or from some other source, and understanding that that these stories have been circulated widely throughout the county, I now wish to say that they are entirely false, and you will be doing me a great favor, and at the same time perform an act of justice, by publishing this letter in full.

My father's name was also James Young, and he died without a will at Antioch on March 17th, 1895. As the records in the County Court will show, he left at the time of his death some personal property, a house and lot in the Village of Antioch, and the farm where my home now is. All of the personal property and real estate on my father's death immediately descended to me, as I was his only child and only heir as he left no will. Anyone desiring to verify this statement can do so by looking at the papers in the estate of James Young (my father) which are in the office of Mr. Hendee, the County Clerk.

Since my father's death I have added to this farm ten acres which I bought from a neighbor Mr. Henry Neil, and the records of Lake County will show that this homeplace, which came to me on my father's death, has ever since his death stood of record in my name and that I am still the owner of this property, free from any claim on the part of anybody, except, of course, that my wife has her dower interest therein. As to my son's wealth, my son James never had any inheritance left to him by anybody; he never owned and never claimed to own or have any title to the land where we lived or to any other land, and never had any money or property given him other than what my wife or myself may have given him at different times. The papers in my son's estate, which are also in the office of Mr. Hendee, the county clerk, show that at the time of his death my son James left no real estate, but left about $1,250.00 in personal property. This $1,250.00 was money and personal property that James himself had earned and saved, and none of it was given to him, except by my wife or myself.

Before anyone believes these false and unfair stories, I hope they will be kind and merciful enough to ask Mr. Hendee, the county clerk, to show them the papers in the estate of James Young, my father, and in the estate of James Young, my son, which will prove the truth of what I have just said. Other false stories concerning me and my family affairs have been circulated, but taking the above statements, which can be verified by the official records of Lake County, and then considering how shamefully they have been falsified, I think I am in a position to ask the readers of this letter not to hastily believe every rumor they hear.

Thanking you for publishing this article, I remain

Yours truly,
WILLIAM YOUNG.

SOME EDUCATED GRUNTERS

Pigs That Have Acquired a Degree of Intelligence Truly Astonishing.

A young friend of my acquaintance at Kennebunkport, Me., has a couple of trained pigs which are believed to be the most intelligent animals of the kind in the state. He yokes them up and drives them the same as steers, says a writer in the Associated Sunday Magazine.

Charles F. Holder, who through his power over all kinds of animals has attracted the notice of psychologists from many institutions, declares that the hog has intelligence fully equal to that of any other animal, except man, and a disposition singularly tractable and docile when treated with kindness.

He has trained a group of grunTERS, and what he cannot make them do can hardly be mentioned. These are not blooded, sleek pedigreed swine, but are the rough, ugly, friendless, wondering kind, against whom is every man's hand. They have been trained to separate, at a certain command, into two squads, as soldiers, Spanish and American. There is a stone fort, over which the Spanish flag is seen to float. An officer of the American forces appears to order an advance. The fort is stormed, the flag falls, the dead and wounded are carried out, the stars and stripes are run up, guns are fired, and everything usual in such a scene is transacted with fidelity.

Mr. Holder drives a team of racing hogs at good speed over the country roads.

About 1815 a London man created a sensation by driving a four-in-hand of pigs through the streets; and 30 years later an old farmer caused much amusement to a great crowd in the market place of St. Albans by entering it in a chaise drawn by four trotting hogs.

There have also been sporting pigs. An old account of a black one which Richard Toomer, one of the royal keepers in the New Forest, broke to find game, and to back and stand, says: "Within a fortnight she would find and point partridges or rabbits, and her training was much forwarded by the abundance of both. She daily improved, and in a few weeks would retrieve birds that had run as well as the best pointer; nay, her nose was superior to the best pointer."

Pigs on the clear-water rivers of British Columbia learn to dive after the salmon lying dead on the bottom of the streams, and the interesting sight may be witnessed of a female diving for a salmon, and having obtained it, taking it ashore for her little ones.

Sacred Tooth in India.

In a recent lecture in New York an American traveler told of a sacred tooth in India which for 2,400 years had been an object of worship, and for hundreds of other shrines in India, he said, "the teeth of human beings are worshiped by Hindus, who above all value good teeth as the reward of good ancestry and of eternal vigilance in the care of the body."

The Whole Thing.

"Loving cup! My, what a big cup it is! What's it for?"
"For rum punch and things like that."
"But why is it called a 'loving cup'?"
"Because it's for people loving rum punch and things like that."—Philadelphia Ledger.

To Be Exact.

"Of course," said Mrs. Goodart, "when you share a cake with your little brother you always give him the largest half."
"Most assuredly not," replied little Emerson, of Boston, "there being but two halves to a cake there can be no 'largest.'"—Philadelphia Press.

High Enough.

"They persist in saying that ballooning at night is good for weak eyes."
"I go to an oculist. He gets his bills up to the balloon altitude."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ADVERTISE IN THE ANTIOCH NEWS.

TACTICS OF ZULUS IN WAR

Their Crescent Formation Adopted by the British Against the Boers.

Once more the rising of some of the Natal natives has turned men's thoughts to the famous Zulu tactics. In the minds of most these are associated with the name of Tyaka, the ruthless Zulu conqueror, who welded into the stock of the Amazulu, the people of the heavens, all the young men of the various tribes he conquered, incorporating them into regiments and thus building up a powerful military nation, says the South African Sun. Yet it was to Dingiswayo the Wanderer that the inception was due. This man, the son of the chief of the UmTetwa, was driven into exile in consequence of an abortive plot to seize the reins of power.

During that exile he lived in Cape Colony and saw the military methods of the British. With instinctive genius he saw how the idea could be adapted to his own nation and on his return and accession to the chieftainship he divided his people into regiments, distinguishing them by names and by a special color of shield for each regiment, though for a time they retained the umkonto or throwing assegai as their chief weapon. He heard the great use made by the British infantry of their favorite weapon, the bayonet, and so he replaced the umkonto by the izwa or broad-bladed stabbing assegai.

The peculiarity of the Zulu tactics has earned it the name of the crescent formation for attack and it is noteworthy that, broadly speaking, it was the method employed by the Boers in their invasion of Natal and adopted by Lord Roberts in his advance through Orange River Colony, and it was the fear of its success which kept the Boers continually on the run. The best thing with which to compare it is the head of the stag-headed beetle. Horns are thrown out widely on either flank, while the main body forms the head itself. From the main body a small force is detached to engage the enemy while the horns creep around the flanks.

This force in the days of Tyaka was frequently dispatched with the command, "Go, sons of Zulu, go and return no more," and death at the hands of their fellows was the fate of those who returned. While this force was holding the enemy the horns carried out their task if possible and as soon as the two horns had met in the rear of the enemy the head or chest was launched upon the position and in the upshot, as a rule, the whole force of the foe tasted the assegai. For in that war no quarter was given or asked.

Great Churches.

A Roman journal gives a list of the great churches of the world. The estimate allows four persons to every square yard of space available. Milan cathedral stands at the head, with capacity for 37,000; St. Peter's holds 32,000; St. Paul's 25,000. The capacity of San Petronio, Bologna, the Florence cathedral and the Antwerp cathedral is about 24,000 apiece; that of St. Sophia, Constantinople, is 23,000; that of St. John Lateran, Rome, about the same (22,900); that of Notre Dame, Paris, 21,000. These are the nine great churches of the world.

WHAT FISH SEE OF WORLD
College Professor Gets the Results with a Camera Under Water.

That a fish in an aquarium has an entirely different view of the external world than we whose vision is unhampered by glass or water is a thought that perhaps has come to but few. One of these few is Prof. Robert W. Wood, of Johns Hopkins university, who has succeeded in obtaining photographs of Mount Vernon Place, and a view looking west down Monument, and north and south down Eutaw streets, as they would appear to a fish submerged near those localities.

As is well known, an eye below the surface of the water sees the sky compressed into a comparatively small circle of light, the center of which is always immediately above the observer, the appearance being as if the pond were covered with an opaque roof with a circular window cut in it. The objects surrounding the pond, such as trees, houses or people, must appear around the rim of the circle of light, but the human being is unable to get a clear notion of their appearance, since his eyes are not adapted to distinct vision under water.

Reasoning from this fact, it occurred to Mr. Wood that a very good notion of how these things appear to the fish would be obtained by immersing a camera in water and photographing the circle of light. His apparatus was constructed out of a lead ball, a short focus lens provided with a very small diaphragm being cemented over a hole perforated in a metal disk which rested on a rim soldered around the inside of the ball. The plate was placed on the bottom of the pail and the whole filled with clean water in a dark room. The lens was covered by a metal cap, operated by a handle on the outside of the pail. The apparatus was set on the ground, and the surface of the water covered with a sheet of glass to prevent ripples, the pail being so full that the glass was in contact with the water. This arrangement obviated the necessity of immersing the affair in a pond, since the function of the latter was performed by the water in the pail above the lens.

A number of interesting pictures were taken, among them being Mount Vernon Place as it would appear to a fish submerged in a pond near the base of the lion. The monument is plainly shown, and the adjacent buildings can be plainly made out around the rim of the circle of light.

Not Himself.
"Your honor," says the defendant in the assault and battery case, "I do not deny having struck this man and having thrown him down the steps and chased him four blocks from my house, and then having thrown stones at him as long as he was in sight, but I plead extenuating circumstances." "Extenuating circumstances?" asks his honor. "How do you make them out?"

"He is a collector for a piano house and he called to demand an installment on the piano just while my daughter was practicing and I was trying to read the paper."—Cleveland Leader.

Sunday Rest in Italy.

The question of Sunday rest is being agitated to a large extent in Italy, and a commission was named some time ago which recommended that as far as possible an uninterrupted rest of from 32 to 36 hours should be insured to all the working classes, and that in case of public services, the men who worked on Sundays should have one day off in the week by turns, domestic servants being entitled to a half-holiday per week. The law does not apply to fishermen.

SMOOT CASE IS REPORTED

MAJORITY OF COMMITTEE FAVOR UNSEATING SENATOR.

Mr. Bailey Maintains Senate Can Create Vacancy Only by Resolution of Expulsion.

Washington, June 12.—The majority and minority reports of the committee on privileges and elections in the case of Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, were Monday presented in the senate, the former by Senator Burrows, declaring that Mr. Smoot is not entitled to his seat, and the latter by Senator Foraker, taking the opposite view. At the same time Senator Bailey, who is a member of the committee, stated that while he concurred in the views of the majority, that Mr. Smoot is not entitled to his seat, he was of the opinion that "Mr. Smoot could not be deprived of his seat and the constitution except by a resolution of expulsion."

In accordance with Senator Burrows' request an extra number of copies of the reports and of the hearings in the case was ordered printed. Mr. Burrows also gave notice that he would call up the case "at the earliest possible moment consistent with the public business," and Senator Foraker expressed his approval of this announcement.

PACKING PLANT IN FLAMES

Armour Oleo Building at Omaha Is Destroyed by Fire, Causing Heavy Loss.

Omaha, Neb., June 12.—A fire which started at about 11:30 o'clock Monday night gutted the building occupied by the oleo department of the Armour packing plant at South Omaha causing the death of one man and a pecuniary loss estimated at $100,000.

The origin of the fire is not known. It started on the top floor of the five-story building occupied by the oleo plant and so inflammable were the contents of the building that all effort to check the flames were unavailing.

The oleo building stands between the main office and the killing department and for some time it was believed that the entire plant would be destroyed.

Vigorous work by the firemen of the company and the South Omaha department, however, confined the fire to the original building.

Cornelius Denny, a member of the Armour fire department, fell from the top of the building and died within a few minutes.

R. C. Howe, general manager of the western plants of the Armour company, said to a reporter that the value of the building was $75,000 and of its contents $100,000. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

Mr. Howe said the work of rebuilding the plant would be begun as soon as the debris has cooled so as to permit of its removal.

DIFFERENT KIND OF PET.

Handsome Young Woman Had Something Better Than Dogs to Love.

When the thin woman in the long gray ulster sat down in the subway car opposite the fat woman holding a bright little Scotch terrier, it could be seen at once that they had points of common interest, and that these points of common interest consisted of dogs, relates the New York Press.

"What a dear little fellow he is," chirped the thin woman.

"Isn't he a dear?" cooed the fat woman, smuggling her pet so closely that he had to sniff for breath.

"Mine is a French poodle," answered the thin woman. "I hear those gray terriers are coming into style, though."

"Yes, they're all the rage," said the fat woman. "I had to give up fifty for Sandy."

A handsome young woman who occupied the seat by the thin woman was an interested listener to the colloquy. She was good-looking enough to attract attention anywhere, and she looked as if she loved everything that was worth loving in this world, including dogs. She leaned over and gave Sandy's head an affectionate pat, and Sandy tried to lick her gloved hand.

"You love dogs, too?" said the fat woman.

"Oh, yes," was the reply, "who could help it?"

"What kind is yours?" came the eager query.

"Mine? Oh, I haven't any. Mine is a baby."

And the fat woman and the thin woman raised their brows, turned up their noses and grew coldly silent, just as if some one had said something to shock their sense of modesty.

Electric Wires in Mines.

The water in coal mines is usually acid, and when it comes in contact with electric lines it forms salts of copper. These salts rapidly disintegrate the copper wire. They also interfere with the working of the insulators. Hence it is necessary, wherever electric wires are used in coal mines, to keep them away from contact with water.

AN INSTRUCTED PRISONER.

So Thoroughly Drilled He Put It On to the Lawyer Who Cleared Him.

A New York lawyer once had to defend a man named Marshall, charged with larceny, and against whom there was very strong evidence. Before the trial the lawyer went to his client and told him that his only chance of escape was in a plea of insanity, and he advised him to play the larceny, and to answer all questions put to him with the word "spoons." The day of the trial came on and Marshall took his place in the dock, pale, haggard and wide-awake.

"Guilty or not guilty?" asked the clerk.

"Spoons!" drawled the prisoner, with a blank stare.

"Come, plead 'guilty' or 'not guilty,'" repeated the clerk.

"Spoons!" was the only reply.

"Prisoner, will you answer the question put to you, or do you want to be punished for contempt?" asked the judge.

"Spoons!" bawled the prisoner, still unmoved.

At this point the counsel for the prisoner interfered and told the court that his client was not in a condition to be out on trial, as he was evidently not responsible for his actions, and it was an outrage on a free citizen, etc.

"Do you understand what is said?" asked the judge, addressing the prisoner.

"Spoons!" was his reply, in wild accents.

It was evident that the man was crazy and the judge ordered him discharged. He was taken in charge by his friends who were with him and left the court with them. His lawyer followed them and congratulated him on his escape, suggesting that it might be a good idea to pay him his fee.

His client stared at him with blank amazement, and moved away with the simple remark: "Spoons!"

When Man Becomes a Sprout.

When all reforms have been realized and everybody's life is trained up in the way it should go on the government trellis and every little sprout with an instinct to branch off in a new direction is gently drawn back and tied with the other vines then, says the New York Globe, a man need only shut his eyes and grow in his allotted place in the trim human garden maintained by the state. He will become a useful human vegetable in this Utopia so many social philosophers are now striving for.

WOMAN'S DAMAGING VANITY

Love of Fine Appearance Sometimes Leads to Painful Self-Sacrifice.

When the Leicester woman was missing some time ago, her relatives published a detailed description of her. It contained this sentence: "Small toe of each foot missing." As it was very unlikely that both toes had been amputated by accident, some one asked the woman's mother to account for the lost toes. After a gallant effort to evade the question, the old lady reluctantly confessed that her daughter had the toes severed to enable her to wear very small shoes!

It is well known that hundreds of women suffer torture every week by having their cheeks tinted with electric needles, or having almost invisible hairs plucked from their fair faces.

In most lonely districts—such as the islets of the Irish and Scottish coasts—the women have a weakness for gaudy colors. A parson in Little St. Kilda tells of a servant-maid of his—a native of the island—who asked his permission to take a brightly-colored Persian hearthrug to church to use as a shawl. Thinking the request was merely a crude joke, he laughingly assented. To his astonishment, he beheld her, a little later, walking jauntily down the aisle of the church, with the rainbow-colored rug about her shoulders, admired and envied by the feminine portion of the congregation, at least.

What John Paul Said.
After the great fight in which John Paul Jones in the Bonhomme Richard made splinters and shreds of the British vessel Scorpion, the English government generously decided that, though vanquished beyond a question, the captain of the lost vessel had behaved with becoming bravery and deserved promotion to the rank of commodore. John Paul Jones heard of this promotion and its cause and said: "Well, by George, if I ever meet that chap again I'll make him an admiral."

TUCKER DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

SLAYER OF MABEL PAGE PAYS PENALTY OF CRIME.

CONDEMNED MAN STOICAL

Walks to Execution with Steady Step Reads Address in Low Tone, Then Sits Down While Guards Adjust Straps.

Boston, June 2.—Charles Louis Tucker, of Aburndale, was electrocuted at the Massachusetts state prison at 12:12 o'clock Tuesday morning for the murder of Mabel Page, who was stabbed to death at the home of her father, in Weston, in March, 1904.

The condemned man, whose case had aroused great public interest and public discussion, and to save whom the most extraordinary effort had been undertaken both by his counsel and thousands of citizens, walked from his cell to the death chair unassisted and even without the guiding arm clasp of a prison guard. He walked without faltering.

The prison guards had opened his cell door and said: "Tucker, we are ready." The condemned man stepped quickly from his cell and scarcely before the legal witnesses to the execution, who numbered six persons, had realized that the final moment was at hand, he had appeared before them in advance of the jail officials.

Just before reaching the electric chair Tucker drew from the right hand pocket of his trousers a piece of paper. From this paper he read mechanically and in a tone so low that the witnesses could hear but a few of the words. The exact phraseology was:

Condemned Man Calm.

Only learned when the paper, which Tucker had replaced in his pocket with wonderful deliberation and calmness after he had finished reading—was removed from his clothing after his death.

Warden Benjamin F. Bridges raised his hand and the electrician threw down his electric switch.

No sound came from Tucker as he lunged forward and after three applications he was pronounced dead.

This was Tucker's final utterance: "I hope that God will forgive me for all the wrongs I have ever done in my past life. I forgive everybody who has wronged me. I am at peace with my Maker. May God have mercy on my soul."

Electrocution Successful.
Tucker then sat down in the chair, and after the guards had adjusted the straps the warden raised his hand as a signal to the electrician.

The medical witnesses agreed that the electrocution was successful, and that Tucker was unconscious, if not quite dead at the very moment that the 1,820 volts of electricity passed through him.

The death sentence was inflicted speedily and the witnesses had returned to the prison office in less than 20 minutes.

SPORT THAT IS EXCITING.

Played by the Owners of Automobiles and the Passing Public.

"We have a new Sunday amusement on the north shore," said Rompkins, according to the Chicago Daily News. "Everybody takes part—youth and old, rich and poor. We play it on Indian road. The game is called 'The players are divided into two classes—those who have sufficiently large incomes to own automobiles and those who have not."

"If you have no automobile, the game is to get across the thoroughfare. If you accomplish this feat without being hit, you win. Otherwise you lose. It is quite exciting and it has proved an excellent exercise."

"Doctors say that it increases the power of observation, adds to one's agility, breaks up the most stubborn cases of rheumatism, and is a sure cure for ennui. Also it increases the physicians and surgeons' practice, and, all things considered, is greatly to be recommended."

"If you own an automobile of the large, red, able-bodied variety, the game is to see how many persons you can hit or almost hit in a ten-mile spin along the boulevard. Some splendid records have been made. Actual homicide, however, is going out of fashion on the north shore because so often it results in exasperating litigation."

"A favorite trick is to see how close you can come to a pedestrian without actually hitting him. This requires excellent nerves and a considerable knowledge of human nature. One has to calculate not only on the speed of the automobile, but on the general activity of the pedestrian and on what may be termed his 'personal equation.' Will he or she jump forward or backward, or will he or she merely go up in the air?"

"For a full-grown man to cross the road alone is not considered a very remarkable thing. But to escort one's dearly beloved grandfather is an evidence of bravery, and to push a go-cart containing one's son and heir shows the extreme of foolhardy heroism."

"Gentlemen conveying their mothers-in-law are barred."

GAMBLERS' FINGER NAILS.

Young Woman Manicurist Observes Some of Their Peculiarities.

"Do you know how to tell a gambler by sight?" asked a young woman with a manicure establishment in a well-known Chicago hotel, says the Chicago Daily News. "Not by loud checked clothes, diamonds or patent leathers. It is to his fingers you must look. Card sharks always have pliable fingers, and usually long ones, but I know by sizing up their finger nails."

The discourse of the girl with the scissors was to one of her young women patrons, who was preparing for a bridge party and wanted to go with as pretty fingers as possible. The young woman in the chair showed interest in the finger nail test for gamblers.

"Yes," resumed the manicurist, busily polishing the nail of her customer's right forefinger, "most of the men who play cards for a living have the nails on four of their fingers cut very short. The first and second fingers of each hand are the ones. The chips used in the games are responsible. They wear the nails away and keep them rough on the edges, so they have to be kept cut short."

The young woman said she was regularly employed by 20 men who depend upon their skill at cards to win cash for their hotel bills in Chicago. Of these, she added, only one has long finger nails. He keeps them by making it a rule never to pick up a chip, but to move the little ivory disks by shoving them with his finger tips or sweeping them into his hand at the side of the table.

Hubburt Lee is a handsome seal brown stallion, stands 15½ hands high and weighs 1100 pounds; foaled 1902. Bred by George F. Swarts, Freeport, Ill. Individually he is a horse of grand finish and plenty of substance, with a fine disposition short back, but a stout body, good head and neck, with the best of feet and legs. His blood lines are of the best, as will be seen by his tabulated pedigree—the most popular and prolific speed producing combination in trotting blood lines, the kind that get the money on the race course. That he will beget speed and grand road qualities there is no doubt, as he not only inherits but possesses these qualities in a marked degree. His dam Velvet Lee is a comparatively young mare and is phenomenally fast. She was taken sick and has never been handled since.

He will stand at Rosecrans, Ill., at $15 to insure. Will not be responsible for accidents or escapes but best of care will be taken of mares sent to me.

Big One Story.

Senator Clay, of Georgia, was once showing a constituent the sights of the national capital when the Washington monument was reached.

"What do you think of it?" carelessly asked the senator, as the constituent stood gazing in awe at the stately shaft.

"Senator," responded the Georgian, gravely, "that's the darnedest highest one-story building I've ever seen."
